

4 million more children will have access to health care if Congress reauthorizes the Children's Health Insurance Program. 6.6 million children will be at risk of losing their health insurance if the president succeeds in blocking reauthorization.

CALL NOW!
Congress needs to hear from you.

Here are the key points to make:

- The time is now for Congress to stand up to the president and override his veto if necessary. A mere extension of the current State Children's Health Insurance Program (SCHIP) puts millions of eligible children at risk of losing their coverage.
- The reauthorization of SCHIP must bring coverage to at least 4 million uninsured children.
- Congress must stand with children, not the president, and support a strong SCHIP bill that gets children the health care they need.

Phone your senators and representatives and urge them to support health care for America's children and say "NO" to President Bush's veto.
